

JEFF COOK

Since 1979 Jeff Cook has made a successful career out of training both horse and rider for all levels of competition, from low hunters up to Grand Prix show jumpers. While working as assistant trainer for George Morris, Jeff's horses and students won many championships at major horse shows throughout the United States, including Palm Beach, Devon, Lake Placid, and South Hampton. On top of his domestic achievements, Jeff and his students have also successfully competed internationally in Italy and Mexico. Because of this success he was asked to be coach at the Pan American Games held in Rio in 2007. Jeff has also written numerous articles on horse training including a 28-month series on starting over fences for Practical Horseman magazine. He continues to be a highly regarded and sought after clinician while living in Bend, Oregon with his wife and three children.
